

Bob Dinh and Andrew Curry
Senior Group Website

Process Paper

Tiananmen square was the first thing we thought of when we read about the topic -- “triumph & tragedy in history”. Tiananmen square massacre was a tragic event where many protesters were killed in a blink of an eye. We are interested in politics, and we don't support the way Chinese government operate as well as the idea of communism. Therefore, Tiananmen is the event that fit both the topic and our interest.

After having the topic, we did some researches regarding the topic to gain some general information. We linked several sources, and started to create the outline. We, then, found images and primary/secondary sources as we wrote according to the outline. We found our sources mostly from the internet; we tried to conduct an interview and found some audio, but we did not have enough time.

We decided to create the website for our research because one of us knows how to create the websites and wrote several websites before. We wanted to create fully open-source website, and we wanted to be able to customize the website whatever we want, so we did not use any program to create it, but rather, we created from scratch. We then followed the instruction on the “contest rule book” and past year winners. I -- the developer -- decided to create the website in one page instead of multiple pages. The process of developing the website was fast as I used my website I wrote before.

Our project related to the theme in how the event is the triumph of the government and the tragedy of thousands of people, especially students. The event proved that Chinese government will not listen, it marked the end of the idea of democracy in Chinese citizens. While Chinese has successfully developed the economic, human rights were still in questioned.